Job training starts early for 'Rumor'

Southport couple will spend a year socializing & training this Labrador pup to help others -- and the dog has about a one-third chance of successfully becoming a 'service dog'

By Carrie Fisher

West Sacramento residents Jamie Putnam and Chris Brungardt have always been dog lovers. While living in Santa Rosa in the early 1990s, they frequently encountered people in town with puppies at their sides, training the pups for potential service work with Canine Companions for Independence (CCI), a non-profit organization that is headquartered in that city and provides highly trained assistance dogs, free of charge, to people with disabilities. CCI trains service dogs that assist people with physical disabilities, as well as hearing, skilled companion, and facility dogs. It is funded almost entirely by private contributions from individuals and businesses and through fundraising activities, and its breeding and puppy raising programs are entirely volunteer-driven.

Jamie knew straight away that puppy raising was something she would love doing while giving her an opportunity to "give back." The moment they secured a home with ample space to accommodate the large breeds that CCI trains (primarily Golden Retrievers, Labrador Retrievers, and crosses of these two breeds), they applied for their first puppy. After an eight-month wait, "Hunt" arrived. Since then, Jamie and Chris have gone on to raise six more puppies for the organization. They received their latest puppy, "Rumor," a few weeks ago.

"Thankfully, she has not gotten into any mischief yet," said Putnam. "She is confident, gets along with Bert and Mak, and can entertain herself when necessary."

Jamie and Chris now have the routine down. First comes the process of "puppy-proofing" their home — gaps behind couches are blocked off, the floor is carefully inspected for any small items that might find their way into a puppy's mouth, socks and shoes are hidden. Pens and kennels are set up. Over the course of 12-15 months, they work with the puppy on housebreaking, obedience, and a set of 30 specific commands which form the foundation for more advanced commands to be learned during advanced training at CCI.

But they consider their largest responsibility to be teaching the puppies socialization. Getting them comfortable with regular outings in public is essential, because once they are placed, trips to places like restaurants or sporting events will be the norm. "We work on making their world a fun, happy place, so they will want to go out" says Jamie. "Our biggest task is to teach the puppies, using positive methods, that learning is fun."

Taking the puppies out frequently does present challenges — quick errands aren't so quick anymore, as the puppy requires constant attention and questions from curious people are commonplace. "We don't mind when people approach and ask questions — we use it as a training opportunity," says Chris. "Our only rule," adds Jamie, "is always ask before you pet. You have to be an advocate for your dog, and be aware of when it might start getting stressed."

Of the seven puppies Jamie and Chris have raised for CCI, two have gone on to graduate from the program. CCI's graduation rate is only around 35 percent, because the organization sets very high standards for the dogs. When it comes to performing service work, the dog's temperament is as important as the training it receives. As Chris explains, not every dog possesses such exceptional temperament, and LEARNING CAN BE FUN: 'Rumor' gets a treat as she walks at the Southport Town Center with owners JAMIE PUTNAM (left) and Chris Brungardt. If she's well-trained and proves 'born to it,' the pup may end up becoming a full-time service dog for someone who is deaf or has another physical disability.

Stiff breeze spreads fire at apartment complex —

A brisk north wind helped spread flames from a ground-floor apartment on Westacre Road to three units and the attic above them yesterday. The female occupant of the original "fully engulfed" unit was hospitalized for smoke inhalation, but no other injuries were reported in the 1 p.m. fire at Meadowbrook Apartments, 401 Westacre Road, said Division Chief Gary Fredericksen of the West Sacramento Fire Department.

Spectators watched firefighters on the roof try to stop the flames from spreading through the attic. They had to "ventilate" the attic, then move and cut again, more than once.

"If they can cut a hole and ventilate it, the fire will stop right there and go straight up," said Fredericksen. "They had to chase the fire -- it was running pretty fast."

The department responded with five engines and a truck. While local firefighters handled the call, personnel from the Davis and UC Davis fire departments came to West Sacramento to stand by in case they were needed.

Nine people -- including two children -- were rendered temporarily homeless by the blaze, which caused about $150,000 damage to four apartments, said Fredericksen.

"Red Cross is putting them up in a motel tonight."

The cause of the blaze is still being investigated. (News-Ledger photos by Steve Marschke)

Jury says City owes:

Police conducted guns-drawn traffic stop & handcuffed two women after their car -- with two toddlers inside -- failed to yield during a traffic stop in 2006

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A federal court on Wednesday ordered the City of West Sacramento to pay $33,400 in damages to two women subjected to a "high risk" police stop, and handcuffed and detained, in 2006. Four West Sacramento police officers participated in the guns-drawn traffic stop after the two women -- who had a pair of two toddlers in the car -- initially failed to pull over for a policeman.

West Sacramento police policy allows officers to call for a "high risk" stop if a driver fails to yield.

The jury did not assess punitive damages against the officers.

A judge had already ruled that the women had been unconstitutionally detained.

Are you 'social networking' like everyone else?

A few months ago, my 30-something year old daughter decided that her obviously out-of-touch father desperately needed to join the 21st century.

"But I haven't particularly liked what I've seen of this new century so far," I tried to explain to her. "I think the last one was way better!"

"Well, that may be," she said, "but if you ask me, there's got to be more to life than just hanging out at the News-Ledger all day long and watching Turner Classic Movies all night long."

"I do other stuff, too," I assured my daughter.

"Like what?"

"Well, I go on lots of long walks."

"But when you're doing that," explained my daughter, "you're just hanging out with yourself. That can't be much fun."

"Hey, I happen to enjoy my own company."

"I'm telling you, Dad, the whole world is passing you by."

"So," I ventured, "just what do you suggest I do about it?"

"You need to get into social networking."

"Social networking?"

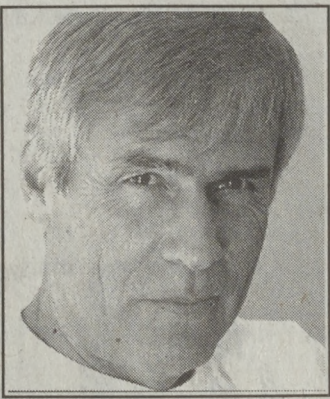

"Haven't you ever heard of MySpace, or Twitter, or Facebook?"

"But that stuff is for younger people – people your age."

"No it's not – social networking is for everyone! In fact, the fastest growing population on Facebook are people who are over the age of 55. Look, I'll email you all the information and even get everything started for you. What do you say? At least check out Facebook. It's a great way for people to stay in touch with family and friends. I'll even post a bunch of photos for you so everyone will be able to see all of your cute grandkids."

To make a long story short, I am now an official member of Facebook, which says it has over 200 million Internet users, making its user base larger than the populations of all the world's countries except for China, India

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

and the United States. And apparently that huge user base has pushed Facebook over the so-called "tipping point", meaning that so many people are now using it that even baby boomers like me have started to participate in large numbers in all the fun and games. Some parts of the site can be a little annoying, like people wanting you to take tests that will determine such things as what Ben and Jerry flavor you would be if you were an ice cream cone, but all in all, it's been a very interesting experience, having even run into some very nice people who regularly read this column.

Anyway, I was talking to a longtime friend and fellow alumnus of West Sacramento's James Marshall High School the other evening and he mentioned that he had seen my very skimpy profile on Facebook.

"Then why didn't you request to be one of my friends on there?" I asked him.

"Because we're already friends in real life," he answered matter-of-factly.

"Well," I said, "the next time you're on there, why don't you go ahead and request that we be friends anyway."

"Why?"

"Because I've only got about a dozen friends on Facebook so far, and I don't want people thinking I'm not very popular."

"Just count your lucky stars, my friend. I've got a couple of hundred friends on Facebook and I never know who's going to pop up on that thing next."

"Wow, you've got more than 200 friends on Facebook?"

"So how long did it take you to do that?"

"Not very long. It's crazy how the number of people you meet on there just multiplies and multiplies. But to tell you the truth, it's really not all that bad. It's mostly just my brothers and sisters and all their friends, and my kids and all their friends, and a bunch of the people my wife and I work with. You just gotta hope that none of your old girlfriends find you on there."

"Old girlfriends?"

"Yeah, as you know, I used to date some pretty strange women – especially back in college – and a couple of them keep pestering me on Facebook, and my wife is not very happy about it. But I'm sure that won't be a problem for you."

"Why not?"

"Because you never had very many girlfriends, and the ones you did were always the Doris Day types, remember?"

"The Doris Day types?"

"You know, sweet, shy, innocent, wouldn't harm a fly – not a stalker in the whole group. In fact, that's one of the things I always kinda admired about you – the way you only dated calm, quiet, rational girls back when we were kids – you know, girls that weren't into a lot of drama – except for what's-her-face, of course."

"What's-her-face?"

"You know, that girl back in high school who sat down in the middle of your parents' driveway with your dad's ball-peen hammer and smashed your class ring into lots of tiny little pieces after you told her you didn't want to go steady anymore."

"Hey, you don't think she's on Facebook, do you?" I suddenly asked with genuine concern.

"You sure better hope not!"

SPORTS

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The NFL will unveil its 2009 schedule on Tuesday night but some folks won't be happy with their teams projected road to Super Bowl XLVI in Miami. Every year of NFL assistants spent the better part of the last 2 1/2 months crafting the 256-game schedule.

Nobody is completely happy because some teams won't like the placement of their bye week. Others will gripe about a three-game October road trip or playing four of their first five games against playoff teams or having to make a cross-country road flight the week after a Monday night game.

The league's television partners also won't be completely happy, especially the Fox and CBS networks, who have lost some of their games to NBC, ESPN and the NFL Network. ESPN will complain about the Monday night package, and NBC will complain about having to pay for an extra bus driver to get the Madden cruiser from Miami to Seattle for back-to-back games in December.

At the end of January, each of the league's 32 teams submits their list of stadium availability and special requests. Each team will give the NFL all of the stadium blocks that they either have to have or are requesting.

It's a very complicated and complex job considering you're trying to serve the 32 individual teams and the five television networks because three teams share stadiums with Major League Baseball (Minnesota, Oakland and Miami). Also, there are nine other clubs that either share parking or municipal services their baseball teams tenants. In every one of those instances, baseball gets regular-season priority in the leases.

The NFL then uses a computer to generate about 1.3 million schedules, of that number; the NFL narrows it down to about 3,500 different scenarios. A few teams will be upset so the league will tweak the schedule one more time just before they release the schedule that will set the course for your favorite NFL team's road to Super Bowl XLVI. I just have one question - Are you ready for some football!

Kings Korner

The Kings (16-65) have a lock on the worst record in the NBA as they fly into Minnesota on Wednesday night to close out the 2008/09 season. It's been a nightmare season that will close with Kevin Martin, Beno Udrih and Spencer Hawes on the injured list. Hawes injured his surgically repaired left knee on Monday in Denver and is scheduled for a MRI as a precaution.

What's up next for the Sacramento Kings? The NBA Draft in June should add another couple of young talented players but Kings will have to go shopping in the free agent market and hire a new coach. Interim coach Kenny Natt just couldn't do the job, especially with the current list of players and injuries.

River Cats

The River Cats lost their home opener 9-4 to Tacoma last Thursday night in a game that was rain-shortened at Raley Field. The Cats won the next night with Ryan Webb on the mound.

Webb (1-0) pitched a solid five innings to even up the Cats season record with a 5-4 victory over the visiting Rainiers. Webb did gave up eight hits but had five strikeouts with only two walks notch the Gatos first win of the season.

The Cats lost on Easter Sunday 6-3 to Tacoma dropping the River Cats' record to 1-3 and putting them into a tie for second in the Pacific Coast League South standings but on Monday night the Gatos rebounded with a 4-1 win over Portland.

The Cats leading the way this season are right-handed pitcher Edgar Gonzalez who looked good in his River Cats debut, allowing 3 earned runs with no walks or strikeouts in five innings. On offensive their being spark by outfielder Eric Patterson, who is battling .400 and second baseman Cliff Pennington, who has a five game hitting streak.

The Cats plan to host an AAA School Day on Wednesday to honor the 62nd anniversary of Jackie Robinson becoming a Major League Baseball's first African-American player of the modern era. Former Negro League players Elmer Carter and Don Porter and members of the Tuskegee Airmen are scheduled to appear in a pregame assembly at 9:30 a.m. before the 11:35 a.m. start.

Sacramento (2-3) hosts Portland on Tuesday at 7:05 p.m., then at 11:35 a.m. on Wednesday before closing the home stand with a 7:05 p.m. start on Thursday. The Cats will be on the road to Tacoma and Portland before they return on Saturday, April 25th to host Las Vegas.

Gator Bait

The Gators (4-1) lost the battle of the undefeated last Saturday at Pacifica against the Islander (5-0) 29-19, who remain the only undefeated team in the NCFL. The Gators will be on the road again next weekend tackling the Sonoma Ravens.

HIGH-RISK STOP from page one

Beecham and passenger Karena Crankson — are natives of Ghana living in the Natomas area, their attorney Michael Haddad told the News-Ledger. They were seeing the bridges and other sights in West Sacramento area before heading across the I Street Bridge to a Sacramento mall. The women are black, and speak English as a second language.

Haddad said race and language may have played a role in miscommunications between the pair and police.

Laurence Angelo, attorney for the city, said Beecham's vehicle almost swerved into the patrol car driven next to it by Officer Timothy Twardosz near 5th and D streets in West Sacramento. Beecham had made an unsafe lane change.

Twardosz initiated a traffic stop, trying his lights, and then blasts from his siren. But "the vehicle still did not stop."

Near 3rd and C, said Angelo "he put on all his overhead (lights) and sirens — by this time the vehicle had traveled four or five blocks, and the vehicle had many places to stop."

Officer Twardosz, at that point, didn't know the people in the vehicle were women and toddlers, said Angelo. Considering that it was a high-crime area, that Beecham's car began traveling abnormally slow, and the car was "failing to yield," he radioed for a "high risk stop" — calling for support from other officers.

Beecham stopped on the narrow I Street Bridge. Angelo said the woman exited the vehicle and began "screaming" at the officer, and he used a public address system to tell her to continue across the narrow bridge and turn onto Jibboom Street in Sacramento.

The women's attorney, Michael Haddad, told the News-Ledger the woman did not get out and scream at the officer.

"Actually, she was crying and she was terrified," said Haddad.

"The evidence was uncontested that a primary officer at that point has the right to report a 'failure to yield,'" Angelo said. "Then when she stopped in the middle of the (I Street) Bridge and didn't turn onto Jibboom Street, he didn't call off the 'high risk stop.'"

He had the discretion to do so.

Beecham pulled over near Third and J streets in Sacramento.

West Sacramento officers Ed Hensley, Geoffrey Albert and Steve Godden helped with the stop, guns drawn.

"After the bridge, (Beecham) slowed to 15 m.p.h. because they didn't know where to pull over," said the women's attorney, Haddad. "Even after the officers knew there were toddlers in the car, they continued to point guns, including an assault rifle, at the car."

The two women were handcuffed and placed in patrol cars while they and the vehicle were "cleared" of warrants, possible contraband and the like. Haddad maintains that this constituted an arrest. Passenger Crankson wasn't even guilty of a traffic violation.

As the city's attorney explained this:

"In a high risk situation, you treat the passenger the same as the driver until you have cleared three things for risks: the driver, the passengers and the car."

"One thing very troubling about this case is that is not only was it outrageous, but it was in total accord with (the department's) policies and training," countered Haddad. "The definition of 'failure to yield' can trigger a 'high risk stop.' At least four years before this, the Ninth Circuit wrote a groundbreaking opinion, saying that for an officer to point a gun at someone, the officer must be facing a real threat."

The city's attorney, Angelo, said he disagrees that either of the women was "arrested," and he "thoroughly disagreed" that the city's "high risk stop" policy is unconstitutional.

"I don't think there is anything Constitutionally challengeable about that policy," said Angelo.

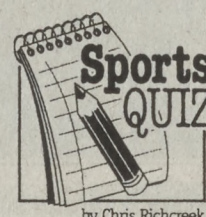

Beecham was initially originally for two infractions, including a misdemeanor failure to yield. She later pleaded no contest to changing lanes without signaling.

The plaintiffs' attorney said the pair was glad that their mistreatment was recognized. But he called the award "stingy," saying "they feel the jury didn't understand what they went through."

He also said he would seek an injunction to force West

Sacramento to put more stringent controls on its "high risk stop" policy.

Angelo answered that the city may appeal the verdict — depending partly on how much money the city is ordered to pay the women's attorneys and whether Haddad pursues an injunction on the policy.

'Civic Center' grows

From the City of West Sacramento

The City of West Sacramento has begun construction of a new 21,000 square foot Community Center, as part of the new Civic Center district already under construction across the street from City Hall.

The Community Center will be designed to accommodate plays and music events, art shows, senior activities, and childcare development. The Community Center will also qualify for the LEED silver certification, making it the first city building to receive a LEED certificate.

The plans for the Community Center grew out of a process to collect input from many sections of the community, including city commissions, organizations, and a task force. The City Council approved the Community Center Master Plan three years ago.

Expected to open in the fall of 2010, the two-story Community Center will include a Black Box theater, an art gallery, café, classrooms, and accommodations for senior activities and childcare programs. Construction will take place adjacent to construction of the three-story campus of Los Rios Community College and the single-story Arthur F. Turner Community Library.

The site is between West Capitol and Merkley avenues, south of City Hall, located at 1110 West Capitol Ave. The Civic Center will also include a transit center, scheduled to open at the same time as the Community Center. (more)

The building's sustainable characteristics will earn a silver certificate from the LEED organization – Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design. These features include the use of solar panels and rooftop plants. The Community Center will use renewable energy and reduce its carbon footprint.

Construction of the Community Center is budgeted at $8 million.

MASKS MAY NOT BE DISCARDED IN SACRAMENTO

That the present influenza condition in Sacramento does not warrant a removal of the mask this week was the consensus of opinion at a meeting of the Sacramento Medical Society, held last night to discuss the efficacy of the mask. A vote was taken, and stood twenty-eight against removal and two in favor of discarding them Saturday.

Dr. G. C. Simmons, Commissioner of Public Health and Safety, was present, and the findings of the meeting are entirely in accord with Health Department's idea of procedure, he said. It is now probable that the original intention of discarding them Saturday will be disregarded by the City Commission, and that the mask will continue to be worn indefinitely.

Bearing out the need of extreme precaution is the fact that the number of influenza cases was slightly higher for Wednesday. Twenty-seven new cases have been reported in by the doctors. The death rate, however, is considerably lower, and there were only four deaths Wednesday from influenza.

The authorities do not see any danger in opening the theatres if the mask is faithfully worn. A close watch will be kept on the records in the next few days and if any bad effects are noted the theatres must close again, said Dr. Simmons.

Simmons told of having inspectors at the gates of the Southern Pacific Shops to see if employees were obeying the ordinance. Four hundred men without masks were stopped and ordered to wear masks by tomorrow or pay a fine. He states that, now that the theatres are opened and people are congregating indoors, an even stricter watch will be kept for the mask evader.

Dr. W. J. Hanna, City Health Officer, states that there is no danger from influenza in attending churches or theatres so long as the masks are worn.

"People who attend the theatres and other meetings need feel no apprehension that they will contract influenza," the doctor said. "Just so long as they wear the masks. We consider that this is every precaution that is necessary."

"The performers? Oh, no; they will not be required to wear them any more than the ministers. They are fully fifteen feet from the audience, and a sneeze only has a range of about three feet. So everything will be perfectly safe."

"So you can go to the shows and enjoy yourself of attend church for the benefit of your soul without fear."

Commissioner of Public Health and Safety G. C. Simmons and City Health Officer W. J. Hanna, made an inspection of every theater in the city Wednesday afternoon to determine if all sanitary precautions and conditions were satisfactory. Simmons says they found that during the time the theaters were closed a thorough renovation had taken place and all were in perfect condition as complying with the health laws.

LARGE SUBSCRIPTION MADE TO WAR FUND AT CONWAY RANCH

Subscriptions to the United War Fund were given a great boost Sunday by a $300 contribution credited to Woodland.

C. Harold Hopkins made the donation in the name of the Conway ranch. He evidently had in mind the old saying, "the better the day the better the deed." The war fund office is closed as a rule on Sunday, but Mrs. Leander Turney very gladly received the subscription.

MUCH WHISKEY USED IN DRY STATES TO FIGHT INFLUENZA

is a bone-dry State, hundreds of quarts of whiskey have been used here during the last three weeks in fighting the Spanish influenza, which has resulted in the death of more than 500 soldiers.

One entire carload was shipped this week to Chicago for distribution by the medical department to other posts.

Nashville, Tenn.—Influenza patients in Nashville and at the government powder plant, where thousands are employed, have been relieved by order of Criminal Judge James D. B. Debow, who ordered the free distribution of 800 cases of confiscated whiskey captured by the police in bone-dry cases.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 20.—The Red Cross Emergency Relief Chairman, Mrs. Harry T. Inge, yesterday called the attention of the Board of Health to the urgent need of whiskey for the treatment of influenza victims. The Federal authorities offered the Relief Committee 400 pints for the care of the influenza victims, and the Board of Health was named as the body to receive the liquor. Whiskey was used and is still being used

WILSON'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

Washington, Nov. 18.—President Wilson, in a proclamation Sunday, designated Thursday, November 28th, as Thanksgiving Day and said this year the American people have special and moving cause to be grateful and rejoice. Complete victory, he said, has brought not only peace, but the confident promise of a new day, as well, in which "justice shall replace force and jealous intrigue among the nations."

By the President of the United States of America.

A Proclamation:

It has long been our custom to turn in the Autumn of the year in praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His many blessings and mercies to us as a Nation.

This year we have a special and moving cause to be grateful and to rejoice. God has in His good pleasure given us peace. It has not come as a mere cessation of arms, a mere relief from the strain and tragedy of war.

It has come as a great triumph of right. Complete victory has brought us, not peace alone, but the confident promise of a new day as well, in which justice shall replace force and jealous intrigue among the Nations.

Our gallant armies have participated in a triumph which is not marred or stained by another purpose of selfish aggression. In a righteous cause they have won immortal glory and have nobly served their Nation in serving mankind.

God has indeed been gracious. We have cause for such rejoicing as revives and strengthens in us all the best traditions of our national history. A new day shines about us, in which our hearts taken new courage and look forward with new hope to new and grater duties.

While we render thanks for these things, let us not forget to seek the Divine guidance in the performance of those duties, and Divine mercy and forgiveness for all errors of act or purpose, and pray that in all that we do shall strengthen the ties of friendship and mutual respect upon which we must assist to build the new structure of peace and good will among the Nations.

Wherefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America do hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-eighth day of November next as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and invite the people throughout the land to cease upon that day from their ordinary occupations and in their several homes and places of worship to render thanks to God, the ruler of Nations.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done in the District of Columbia this sixteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighteen, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

WOODROW WILSON.

By the President.

ROBERT LANSING, Secretary of State.

APPEALS TO PRESIDENT WILSON ON PROHIBITION IN CALIFORNIA HAVE STRIKING CONTRAST

LET EVERY FAIR-MINDED PERSON JUDGE WHICH IS THE STRONGER AND WHICH SHOULD BEAR MOST WEIGHT WITH THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF THE NATION

The State Law and Enforcement League, with Rev. Paul Smith as President and ex-Senator Edwin E. Grant as law enforcement executive, has joined the ranks of the Prohibitionists and is urging President Wilson to sign the Emergency Prohibition Bill and pay no attention to the appeal of the State Viticultural Commission. Here is a telegram that was sent to the President:

"President Woodrow Wilson, White House, Washington, D. C.—Thousands of patriotic citizens of California request you to sign Emergency Prohibition Bill.

We hope you will not be fooled by the liquor propaganda of the California State Viticultural Commission, which has for many years fought the battles of the booze interests in California.

The liquor argument to "save the vineyards" has become a huge joke in California, as the Bone-Dry Prohibition Amendment carried in California.

The so-called wine grape interests were saved by the votes of the tenderloin and booze interests of San Francisco.

A State Legislature pledged to the ratification of the National Prohibition Amendment was elected in spite of the frantic efforts of San Francisco's tenderloin to "save the vineyards" and in spite of booze propaganda of the State Viticultural Commission.

EDWIN E. GRANT, Executive, State Law Enforcement League, 670 Monadnock Bldg., San Francisco, Cal. November 19, 1918. The following telegram to-day was sent to President Wilson by Edgar M. Sheehan, Secretary of the California State Board of Viticultural Commissioners:

Thousands of grape growers in California request this department of the State Government to send you a message asking your good offices in their behalf in relation to proposed Federal legislation which would place the United States on a Prohibition basis next July.

They submit for your consideration the war status and the cessation of hostilities, together with the advent of universal peace.

They cannot understand the necessity for such legislation as having any basis as a war measure and they ask that you allow them the unhampered privilege of cultivating their property without the threat of destruction.

The State of California has just decisively rejected by a direct vote of her people the proposal of prohibition within her own borders, and the justice of this plea is submitted for your earnest consideration.

Many of the boys coming back from Europe will find their duties in civil life in the vineyards and the plea is made for them that they should not find themselves deprived of their usual activities after their patriotic services.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial:

Mail is on the mind

Traffic on Industrial Boulevard normally becomes a little sparse at night, after the rush of commuters. But this night will be different. It's April 15, or "tax day," and residents from all over the Sacramento area struggling to get their tax returns postmarked this evening before midnight will converge on Industrial. Clutching maps printed out from Google and Yahoo, and following each other like lemmings, they'll find that spot in front of the regional mail sorting center where they can hand over an envelope with their 2008 tax return. This spot is Sacramento's last, best place to get mail accepted and postmarked.

If previous years are anything to go by, we'll see a line of headlights snaking off the freeway and crawling to the postal center. The cars' drivers will show a variety of emotions generated by the tax deadline: relief, exhaustion, resentment. They'll drop off their returns and try to find their way back to the freeway – vowing to finish their taxes earlier next year.

As you probably know, the News-Ledger is delivered to subscribers by that same U.S. Postal Service, and the USPS does a good job of delivering that portion of our subscribers' newspapers that fall within West Sacramento city limits. A very good job.

It's also true, though, that the USPS doesn't perform as well with copies of the News-Ledger sent out of town – even just a few hundred yards out of town. Anything headed beyond the reach of local mail carriers must first undergo some sort of mysterious and unpredictable sorting process; it can take days for some of these newspapers to make it across the grand ol' Sacramento River.

And there are a few other little idiosyncrasies to the mail service. For example, the postal service uses a new "computer forwarding system" to let us know when a News-Ledger has been sent to an address that is no longer valid. A photocopy of the "bad" mailing label is turned into a postcard and sent back to us, along with a sticker containing the recipient's new address, if available. We're billed 50 cents for each one of these notices. And if we aren't told promptly about somebody's bad address, then it's possible we will meanwhile have sent three or four or five more newspapers to the same bad address – each one of which will generate new postcard and another 50 cent postal fee.

Delays of a few weeks (or months) are not uncommon with this fancy system. But one of these "computer forwarding system" notes, in particular, caught our eye. The post office sent us a card telling us that a newspaper sent to one of your fellow subscribers had gone to a bad address. The notice was received earlier this month.

The offending newspaper had been mailed on September 27, 2006. The fee to be informed of this in 2009 was 50 cents.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

PICK OF THE WEEK

"The Wrestler" — Mickey Rourke gives the performance of his career as Randy "The Ram" Robinson, a washed-up wrestler who was a big hit back in the 1980s but is now long past his prime. No longer a part of the big circuit, Randy accepts matches for a few local indie promoters earning a few bucks here and there and then works a day job at a supermarket in New Jersey.

One day he gets an offer to perform a 20-year-anniversary rematch of a Madison Square Garden bout between himself and his arch nemesis from the '80s, "The Ayatollah," who is now working at a used-car lot in Arizona. Randy begins to get himself back into shape and in the process, has a heart attack and is told that he can no longer wrestle or take steroids again or he will die.

In the midst of all that mess, he tries to hook up with a stripper (Marisa Tomei), who like Randy is well past her prime but still has a few good moves left. He also tries to make peace with his estranged daughter (Evan Rachel Wood), before he ignores the doctor's advice to go ahead with the wrestling match that probably will kill him.

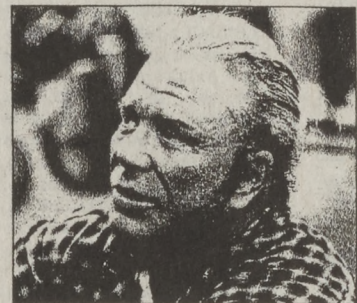

"The Wrestler" is one of those great indie films filled with awesome performances, a great story and none of the pat mainstream Hollywood endings. It's one of those films you heard a lot about but probably didn't get a chance to see in the theater. Now's your chance.

TV SERIES

"Top Gear 10: The Complete Season 10" — With more than 350 million viewers worldwide, "Top Gear" is one of the most popular television programs on the planet. Only recently have we in America heard of it because of its airing on BBC America. It's a show about cars, but with a difference. The three guys who host the show aren't professional drivers or automotive-industry journalists. They're just three dudes who are crazy about cars. Great cars. Like Ferrari, Lamborghini, Porsche, Bugatti and Lotus.

In one episode, they take a Bugatti Veyron (the most powerful, fastest production car ever made) and race it against a Eurofighter Typhoon fighter jet. In another episode, the guys are challenged to buy a car for $1,000 and modify it to sail the English Channel.

Mickey Rourke

And in what is probably the best show of this season, the gang goes to Africa, where they each buy a cheap car and then attempt to race each other through the African wilderness.

Each episode contains a challenge segment like the ones mentioned above, along with reviews of newer car models, news, test drives and a celebrity interview segment where, at the conclusion, the celebrity must get behind the wheel of a "reasonably priced car" and drive a timed-lap on the show's race track. If you ever wanted to know how fast Dame Helen Mirren can negotiate a hairpin turn, then "Top Gear" is the show for you.

Donna's Day Creative family fun

by Donna Erickson

Thrifty Taco Soup Is a Big Hit

Whether you make it spicy or not, this family-friendly taco soup will be a big hit at mealtime. It's thrifty, super easy to prepare and just as yummy to eat the following day — if there are any leftovers.

Get your kids or grandkids involved and call it "Can Opener 101" or "Dump" cooking school, because most of the ingredients come in cans right off your grocer's shelf and are poured directly into your soup pot. Making a so-called dump recipe might sound like a cheater move, but I simply don't have time to spend all day cooking beans, and since my vegetable garden is still thawing out, canned organic stewed tomatoes on sale at our neighborhood food co-op are a must.

I also pick up good-quality, organic, free-range chicken broth in quart-size boxes in bulk at Costco for less than $1.75 each, and I've discovered very good lean, organic ground beef for less than $4 a pound in its fresh-meat department.

One of the most delightful things about a garden is the anticipation it provides.

The price, quality and taste are just right, and the recipe is easy to remember. Think in "ones" because there is one of every ingredient.

Here's what you'll need for six to eight servings:

- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1 15-ounce can kidney beans, undrained
- 1 15-ounce can black beans, undrained
- 1 15-ounce can whole-kernel corn, undrained
- 1 28-ounce can stewed tomatoes
- 1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
- 1 1-1/4-ounce package taco seasoning mix
- 1 handful tortilla chips for garnish
- 1 tablespoon grated cheese for garnish
- 1 dollop sour cream for garnish (optional)

In a skillet, brown the ground beef with the chopped onions. Drain any excess fat. Transfer the beef and onions to a stockpot and add the beans, corn, tomatoes, tomato sauce and seasoning. Simmer for an hour on low heat. Or, cook in a slow cooker on Low for five to six hours.

To serve: Ladle into bowls and top with crushed tortilla chips, shredded cheese and sour cream. Prepare a green salad on the side, if you wish.

Why He Didn't Call You Back
By Rachel Greenwald
(Random House, $24)
Reviewed by Katy Olson

From the understandable to the absurd, author and professional matchmaker Rachel Greenwald breaks down men's most tried-and-true excuses to discover the real reason they don't call back after a date. Greenwald applies the aggressive research skills she developed as a Harvard MBA and the razor-sharp intuition honed during her years as a dating coach to the most discouraging dilemma daters face in the days following an apparently amazing date: "Why didn't he call me back?"

Advocating that you change his perception instead of your personality, Greenwald's vast study and witty analysis of men's behavior is nearly a science in its fine points, and truly a contemporary approach to the speedily evolving game of dating. After conducting business-world-style "Exit Interviews" with nearly 1,000 men who failed to follow up, Greenwald supposes that the swelling popularity of dating and networking sites like eHarmony and Facebook leads men to believe that their ideal woman — someone hotter, smarter, funnier or more fill-in-the-blank than the one across the table — is just a click of the mouse away.

Greenwald explains the stereotypes men often rely on in order to easily categorize a woman on the first date: from the glitzy Park Avenue Princess who grills her date about the size of his bank account over a five-star dinner, to the aggressive, husband-hunting Closer, who made one hapless guy feel like "she was interviewing [him] to be a sperm donor!"

Most women don't fall into such limiting categories. But the author explains, using carefully culled chronicles of dates gone awry, how easily applied these labels are in a man's world seemingly flooded with available women, and how smart daters can avoid the trap by perfecting their date's perception. Loud and clear, Greenwald offers the no-frills, tough-love advice that every single woman doesn't want — but often needs — to hear.

Gardening gives one back a sense of proportion about everything—except itself.

- 1/18 teaspoon salt

1. Trim all fat from lamb. Cut lamb into 12 chunks. In medium bowl, mix lamb, chili sauce and teriyaki sauce; set aside.

2. Thinly slice cabbage; discard any tough ribs. Cut romaine crosswise into 1/4-inch-thick slices. Cut green onions into 2-inch pieces. Cut orange in half; cut each half into 3 wedges; cut each wedge crosswise in half.

3. In large bowl, stir orange juice, mayonnaise dressing, vinegar, mustard, pepper and salt until blended. Add cabbage and lettuce; toss salad slaw well.

4. Preheat broiler if manufacturer directs. On 4 all-metal skewers, alternately thread lamb chunks, green-onion pieces and orange pieces.

5. Place kabobs on rack in broiling pan. Brush lamb with any chili sauce mixture remaining in bowl. Place pan in broiler at closest position to source of heat; broil kabobs 10 minutes or until lamb is medium-rare or until desired doneness, turning skewers once.

6. Serve kabobs with salad slaw.

Quesadillas Get a Healthy Makeover

Quesadilla is a Spanish word for "little cheese thing." The recipe typically calls for mounds of cheese and pork chorizo between two corn tortillas. Although there's just a small amount of cheese in this recipe, it's the lean ground chicken, the spices and the delicious salsa that are the stars of this healthy dish.

I adapted this recipe from one served at Lake Austin Spa Resort. The substitution of lean ground chicken breast for pork chorizo cuts down on the calories without sacrificing any of the flavor.

Chorizo sausage is usually made with ground pork and combined with fat, wine, paprika and salt and stuffed into a casing made of tripe. Paprika and red chilies are the primary spices in Mexican chorizo and infuse it with a deep reddish color.

This recipe uses the same spices that are used in the pungent Mexican sausage to marinate the ground chicken. This allows you to mimic the flavor of chorizo while cutting out the fat. Small, diced potatoes add a distinctive texture and also absorb the spices. The avocado salsa completes the dish and adds a burst of fresh citrus with the addition of the lime juice.

Try one of these healthy quesadillas, accompanied by a dab of fat-free sour cream, if desired, for breakfast, lunch or dinner. You'll never miss the original recipe!

CHICKEN CHORIZO AND POTATO QUESADILLAS

1/2 pound ground all-natural chicken breast

- 2 tablespoons chili powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- 1 small bay leaf, ground in a spice grinder
- 1/12 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon Italian Seasoning
- 1 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
- 1 cup diced and peeled potato
- 2 teaspoons canola oil
- 1/12 cup diced, purple onion
- 1/12 cup shredded reduced-fat Cheddar cheese
- 8 corn or whole-wheat tortillas

The Salsa:

- 1/12 ripe avocado
- 1/12 cup chopped tomato
- 1/12 cup diced purple onion
- 1 large garlic clove, minced
- 1/14 cup chopped fresh cilantro leaves
- 1/12 serrano chili, minced
- 2 teaspoon fresh lime juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper

To prepare the Quesadillas:

1. Combine the chicken, chili powder, salt, pepper, bay leaf, cinnamon, Italian seasoning, cloves and vinegar in a bowl, mix well. Set aside.
2. Boil the potato in lightly salted water in a saucepan until tender, drain. Heat 1 teaspoon canola oil in a non-stick skillet over medium-high heat. Sauté the chicken mixture, stirring to break up the pieces, until the chicken is almost cooked through.

3. Add the potato, onion and remaining canola oil, cook until the potatoes begin to brown. Remove from heat and mash mixture. Top each of 4 tortillas with an equal amount of chicken mixture. Top with shredded Cheddar cheese, then another tortilla. Spray a griddle or nonstick skillet with non-stick cooking spray.

4. Cook the Quesadillas over medium heat until both sides are crisp, turning once.

To prepare the Salsa:

In a small bowl, mix together the avocado, tomato, onion, garlic, cilantro, chili, lime juice, salt and pepper until well-combined. Cut Quesadillas into wedges and serve with the salsa. Makes 4 servings.

Times Are Tough, But Cutting Car Insurance Costs Now Could Cost You Later

(NAPS)—In times of economic uncertainty, people look for ways to save money—from clipping coupons to limiting meals out. But cutting back on certain things now could mean heftier bills later. That definitely holds true for car insurance—an accident could cost hundreds, and you don't want to be stuck with the bill.

Drivers need to stay insured to protect themselves, but there are ways to save real money on your insurance. Here are a few tips from leading car insurer Progressive:

Stay covered. If finances are tight, you might consider downgrading to minimum-limits, liability-only coverage to save money. But that may not be enough—if you cause an accident, your insurance might not cover all the damages. Carry the right physical damage and liability coverages with sufficient limits to meet your needs so that fender bender doesn't cost you big bucks.

If you're considering dropping coverage altogether, you might want to reconsider: Doing that is illegal in most states, and if you drop your insurance now, you'll pay more to get a new policy later because most insurers want to see proof of continuous coverage.

Protect yourself from uninsured and underinsured drivers. You might not be the only one who's looking to save a little dough—other drivers might cut costs by canceling their policy or reducing their coverage. And if one of those drivers hits you, you could be left paying for the damages. Uninsured and Underinsured Motorist coverage can help protect you.

Shop around. Rates can vary greatly from company to company, so shop around to find the best deal. A local independent insurance agent can offer more choices and savings because he or she can review multiple options to find the right mix of companies, policies and rates for you.

Make sure your policy is up to date. If you've moved, gotten married or bought a home, check with your agent—you may be eligible for lower rates.

Raise your deductibles. According to the Insurance Information Institute, raising your deductibles to $500 could reduce your Collision and Comprehensive costs by 15 to 30 percent.

Research before you buy. Before you buy a new car, ask your agent what it will cost to insure. Generally, smaller cars with lower horsepower are less expensive to cover.

Check coverages. Owners of older or inexpensive cars could consider dropping Comprehensive and Collision coverages. Doing that can save hundreds of dollars each year.

Check for available discounts. Talk to your agent about discounts your carrier provides. You might be eligible for a car insurance discount if you pay in full, are a loyal customer, sign up for paperless billing or list another car on your policy.

determining whether a puppy will ultimately be "cut out" for the job is a process that often takes many months. "The dog has to be born to do it," Chris says, "and not just want to chase squirrels."

If a dog is released from the program, the puppy raisers get first dibs on adopting it. Bert and Mak, two handsome and lovable Labrador crosses, both made their way into Jamie and Chris's family after failing to graduate from advanced training.

Jamie and Chris become very attached to each puppy they raise. So how do they give them up?

"With a box of tissues," says Jamie.

There is pain involved, but it is mitigated by the powerful rewards that come with witnessing the profound, life-changing affects the dogs have on the lives of their recipients. Jamie and Chris become emotional when relaying some of the success stories — an autistic child who began speaking and sleeping through the night for the first time after receiving his companion dog, for instance. Or, a 13-year-old girl with cerebral palsy, confined to her bed and unable to ask for assistance until getting her service dog, who was able to routinely alert her parents to her needs.

Wallis Brozman is a 22-year-old woman living in Davis. She has dystonia, which causes abnormal, uncontrollable movements and twisted posturing of the body. She received her first service dog, Caspin, from CCI in February. A mere four days after coming home with Caspin, Wallis was outside walking him at night when she suffered a dystonic attack. Stuck in the dark, rigid and in spasm, Wallis panicked and Caspin immediately sensed her dilemma. He began gently pulling her wheelchair back toward home, something he had only been trained to do with a pulling harness, which they didn't have on-hand. Caspin pulled her back into the apartment and turned out the light at bedtime.

"Caspin has made a tremendous difference in my life," Wallis says. In addition to helping provide her with more freedom and security, Caspin also helps create a bridge of understanding with others who may not have approached Wallis as openly before. And, he is a true friend. "Caspin is always there to lend a nonjudgmental ear when I need one, and a comforting shoulder when I need to cry," she says.

Jamie and Chris don't have plans to stop puppy raising any time soon. "We're addicted," says Jamie, "and we've made so many amazing connections through the organization." Chris agrees. "At the end of the day, it's really about people," he says. "We absolutely love our work — we always know whatever the outcome, it's gonna be good."

Come on in -- the water's fine

So you want to have a little fun. But you don't want to drive very far. And you certainly don't want to spend too much money. How about this:

The Lake Washington Sailing Club will hold its 75th anniversary "opening day" festivities on Saturday, April 25, at the port right in the middle of West Sacramento. Included is an invitation for you to try sailing in a small boat -- no charge, and a lifejacket will be provided if you don't have your own. Free sailboat rides will be scheduled from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and there will be demonstrations, food and refreshments.

From I-80, take Harbor Blvd. south, turn right on Industrial Blvd. and follow the signs (you'll turn left in a few hundred yards).
